There is no wrong way to fish buggers...the big things for me were simple trial and error... I have stripped them under logs, brush etc. I have also let them drift in big pools often getting hits on the swing, if not then vary the retrieve... and sooner or later find what they want... I also weigh some with lead wire and others I dont, depends on the water. Biggest thing I have found is color. I have never, some people wont believe it, caught a trout on black bugger! Olive, white (red thread gill) and brown have been great and are almost all I fish! hope this helps.
