The bigger ones are probably fine for nymphing rigs, but the little tippet rings are so stupid light (they're also, supposedly, Ti) that they're able to float.

Since this is the year I tie knotted leaders, I plan to use them in wet fly leaders I construct... Come next fall, I'll see how many in my pack are left. :)

The chain is a pretty interesting idea, though.. One I'll have to look at when I hit the craft store next. However, I'm afraid they'll probably be too pliable, and if the line ends up at a point where the ring is joined, it'd just slip out.

Even I, the cheapest man on this forum, need to admit defeat once in awhile. That said, I don't really see that much of a need for these things. I think this is another item borne of the competition set that might make sense in their fishing game, but in real life isn't very practical.
