I'm curious to know if this is really any different than simply being dishwashing liquid ala PhotoFlo.

Are you talking about the photoflo for drying film. I don't think I have anymore of that, I gave all my dark room equipment away.

As far as the xink goes, I'm always afraid of getting it on something I want to float. I can feel the difference when I cast, it must add weight or cause it to obsorb more water.
