I have used it, but don't use it often.

Frankly, for flies that are already wet, I don't think it does anything at all. What it does do is makes them sink right away. For instance, wet flies, eggs, streamers, etc., anything bushy really, they tend to float till you get em good and waterlogged, which can be a few casts. I have spooked fish that way, the first cast with a new fly doesn't get down and its over. But with stuff like this, you avoid that waterlogging period and its good to go right away.
