No, you said you werent going to retire it because you're contrary. Sooner or later your flyfishing will suffer from this just when you needed it LEAST. You know, the days when you've had all the B.S. you can handle and can really use some relaxing with the flyrod. Thats when the line really falls apart and you're normal savior is now compounding the B.S.

I've done what you're doing and that line looks very familiar. You dont have to take my word for it. I merely ask you remember me when this happens. 😊
