

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Redington or Simms?

Re: Redington or Simms?

Author: : TimMurphy

Date: : 2011/4/23 0:22:37

URL:

Dear Rick,

Hey, I got 9 years out of the worst waders ever made, Orvis Clearwaters. No one else anywhere ever liked them. They were too lightweight and they were an ugly bluish green color and they leaked according to everyone else. I guess I got the one good pair?

I'm 6'5" and 330, and Orvis 2XL's fit me like I paid a tailor to make them for me.

Personally, I can't see the need for 3 or 4 layers of breathable material in a wader. I mean, if one layer is breathable, and then you triple or quadruple the breathable material all it does is get more expensive and more sweatier. But I'm big and fat, so what do I know?

Get cheap waders that allow a range of movement and if you are one of those people that kneels alot buy a pair of wrestling kneepads to slip over your waders. You'll save 100's of dollars that way.

Regards,

Tim Murphy 😊