

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Redington or Simms?

Re: Redington or Simms?

Author: : jayL

Date: : 2011/4/27 9:13:17

URL:

Quote:

nymphingmaniac wrote:

simms. I used to have the philosophy that I can get 2-3 pairs of cheapos for the same price, but I will never go back.

Got a pair of G3s. Next time I might go with the headwaters. Essentially the same except for 3 layers (I think 5 is overkill) in the headwaters and the G3 has some frills (which I like, but not worth the extra 120.00)

One thing i noticed that really sets simms apart from less expensive waders is the quality of the neo bootie. Wears like iron.

Aside from the 5 v 3 layers, the difference between the headwaters and the g3 is that the headwaters have a seam on the inside of both legs. The g3 has its seam in the front. This is a major, major difference imo.

As a shuffler, that's a no-go. I would wear through that inside seam within 5-10 trips. It took me 4 to destroy the freestones.