

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Redington or Simms?

Re: Redington or Simms?

Author: : Sylvaneous

Date: : 2011/5/3 18:38:58

URL:

Quote:

nymphingmaniac wrote:

simms. I used to have the philosophy that I can get 2-3 pairs of cheapos for the same price, but I will never go back.

I've thought about this argument, too, but what about the times when you find out it's time to change? When the one fails? Carry both? Switch out with wet feet? So that keeps me in the Simms, even though I'd probably get a pair of Patagonias IF they cost a fair piece less than the SIMMS, which they don't. So I won't. And I like a product actually made in USA. My most-used firearms are Browning, and they're from Japan. Most of my rods are of USA manufacture. So little of anything else is. All things being equal, being a proud, patriotic American Liberal, I'll buy USA every time. The fact that they have a long, proven track record AND you can do the isopropyl alcohol spraying trick to check for leaks, which is super-nice!

Syl