What constitutes an extremely low percentage?

Also, one of the frequent requests here and throughout the environmental community is slow things down. If this is done the proper tests can be done, the proper processes followed and proper materials for casing can be developed. Instead we have a wild west scenario where some companies act responsibly, with the proper safety nets and proper procedures and other companies wing it. Meanwhile it takes mistakes like the ones Chesapeake had for DEP to bring about changes necessary to force companies to act responsible.
