

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Zebra midges in July?

Re: Zebra midges in July?

Author: : wsender

Date: : 2011/6/26 19:35:13

URL:

Quote:

buffalo7 wrote:

It wont be long before the major hatches are over and they will work even better. I agree with jayL, I use them in January and in late summer thats all you see hatching. I watch the fish in the pools when midges are hatching in the summer, they don't come up for the midges most of the time, they just slowly cruise around gulping them up as they are riseing.

The pic below is of one I use year round. It was taken out of my flybox when I took the pic, you can see that it's been chewed on, not as bad as some I have.

Nice fly. They'll catch fish all day long. Just one comment. You might want to reconsider having the thread go that far down the hook. It'll catch fish, which it already has, but you're more likely to lose a few.