

Subject: : Tips and Tricks

Topic: : slapping the hamster???

Re: slapping the hamster???

Author: : Fishidiot

Date: : 2006/12/22 18:31:44

URL:

I think what they're talking about here is the message that a hard hitting land creature sends to predatory fishes. The "hamster" merely refers to mice and voles which do get eaten by bass and trout. I think under certain conditions, particularly at night, bass and trout will move to investigate the sound of something dropping in the water. Of course, slapping terrestrials on the surface has been a proven way to get a trout's attention - this is the same concept writ larger.