Tibors make abels look like a value pick.

Ya, well someone works for LL Bean, who may offer an employee discount I would imagine. Guess who carries Tibor?

But continuing non the less, I would note that the other two non-Bean brand Bean sold reels you mention, the Ross and Lamson may both be a tight fit for the line. The Ross is 7-9. How much backing you gonna get on that reel before you have to stuff the line in there? Given that fly reels are not level wind, line can pile up on one side of the reel causing the reel to tighten up. This happens to me because of the "get lightest reel in the world" mentality. Given choice of 3-5 or 5-7 and I wanted to put a 5 wt line on it I would choose the 3-5 which turned out to be a mistake imo.
