Wait--so they're discontinuing the A3...?

Just kidding. I know this is a tread about high end sealed drag reels.

On that note, I used my Allen Alpha in the salt on an OBX trip last week. Hit specks pretty hard in the sound, blues in the surf, and did some kayaking that dunked the reel in saltwater. After opening it up to clean it a few times I found some brown stuff where the spool screws into the reel. Not sure if it is starting to corrode or if that is just very dark oil that was seeping out of the drag. Still feels smooth, I'm just not sure how long it's going to last in the salt, even with regular cleaning.
