Ed, your event was great and probably factored into my thoughts on this yesterday. Just having an opportunity to take to the stream with a more experienced angler can be valuable. Probably because the Jamboree is such an adult party as well as fishing, we haven't many young folks attend and I didn't see a lot at the other mini-Jamborees either. I thought if they would recruit an adult to bring them out and fish along, participants in the mini-Jams would surely make room for them to join in some group outings.

If any of you young folks want to try steelheading, I would be happy to spend half a day with you and your parent or adult friend at the Steelhead mini-Jam in Erie this Fall showing you what little I have learned about the Erie Tribs over the past several years.

Other than THE Jam and the Steelhead Jam, I have not had a chance to attend any others to offer help.

Just throwing this out there.
