Don't make me post that Jerry Fudd picture. 😬

So far, besides the Catskill Mini Jam, possibly another Trico Mini Jam, and the Steelhead Mini Jam, there's gonna be one heck of a Flytying Mini Jam.

I did a casting program for the folks at the Lehigh Gap Nature Center, and being the opportunist that I am, I obtained permission to use their awesome new facility for a tying Jam. Their lab facility will be perfect for this! I'm gonna invite some tyers from the International Tying Symposium in Somerset to attend, but the real draw is gonna be our own PAFF tyers.

We could start off by having someone teach basic techniques, and then move on from there.

My thoughts on this at the moment would be to make a post and have our members sign up/pick a fly that they'd like to teach, and have them do a demo on how to tie it.

I'm looking at December sometime for this - it would fit in between things nicely, and provide some relief for the winter shack nasties.

Thoughts?

This fall I actually might be tying there! Hopefully I will be the first 14 year old to have his own booth :P And I would certainly try to go to the tying jam since I am not going to have wrestling this year...
