I wouldn't say the stream is in bad shape but I have been catching less fish on average. I think the low water conditions of the summer and early fall are more to blame than anything. I have never caught a fish on a midge nymph there. Pheasant tails, baetis and copper john nymphs always catch fish for me. I fished there Sunday and caught fish on a pink egg and a copper john. I really don't fish eggs much but ran into some guys that were having luck with them so I tied one on. First cast, 18" rainbow. Missed a few more after that with it then had to go home.
