

Subject: : Tips and Tricks

Topic: : How to catch stocked Rainbows?

Re: How to catch stocked Rainbows?

Author: : ryguyfi

Date: : 2011/7/25 16:45:33

URL:

sweet rod and reel btw

rainbows love eggs, if you don't have any PM me and I'll mail you out some.

Check out fish.state.pa.us You can find a list of stocked streams in your area. Also do a search for "class A" and "natural reproduction". There you will find a few lists of local streams that have wild trout in them. Once you get a few of those, you won't be thinking much of the stocked rainbows.

The conditions are pretty rough out there right now. Don't feel bad if you're not getting into a ton of fish. Buy a stream thermometer and if you get a temp of 70 or higher (for trout) then you should probably leave them be (unless you're fishing to toss one on your dinner plate) . They're not very tolerable of warmer water and sometimes the short struggle of fighting a fish may kill them.

All in all, keep asking questions and get out there and catch some fish!

Ryan