Count me in with it being a bad idea also.

Maybe it's time for the parks to start charging a day use fee to bring in some revenue. I don't think it would be that big of a deal for a person - who really wants to visit a certain place - to cough up a modest fee.

The wife and I vacationed in Michigan last month - and that's what they do there. They charged like $8 a day per vehicle - and it was good for any state owned park.

And every place that we visited was very well maintained. Certainly made it worth the cost IMO

This was my experience in Florida, too. Wiggins Pass (Naples) charged a similar fee and was packed.

Taxes are lower there, too. ...just sayin'.
