Hello all,

A bit about me - I'd first like to say this site is a good one for fly info in PA. I myself have just started to get into fly fishing, and am trying to get back into fishing for trout. I used to fish mainly for trout when I was younger and mostly fished the Tulpohocken creek and surrounding areas near Reading. I mainly now fish for bass and saltwater species.

I've started going on a camping trip with some guys I work with to Pine creek near Cedar run. We're going up this May 11-13 and floating and fishing the Canyon and down to Slate Run. Since I'm new to fly fishing I've checked out some dates of the hatches and it seems like during the time I will be there Blue Quill, March Brown, Light Cahill and sulfurs will be hatching. What are some flies that imitate this insects? Are there any other good flies to use? (wet, nymphs, etc.) I'd like to start tying up a few so that I have a supply for the trip. Thanks a lot
