Were your carp big? I would take a guess and say this one weighed 10-12lbs. I think that is an average fish for a pond.

Not sure on weight, the one I landed was probably 20" or so. The one that broke off seemed bigger, but I never got it that close...it was swimming away from me the entire time until it broke off.

I should add, I caught these fish in the Spring...late April/early May when the water was likely a lot cooler than it is now. Maybe higher temps, less DO as trevor mentioned has something to do with their sluggishness?

If you like fishing for them give it another try...sometimes fish fight strong, other times they don't. Who knows, but only one fish probably isn't enough data to make a case either way.
