PWK5017 - Not every carp will take you to your backing but they are nearly the only freshwater fish that will with reasonable frequency! Pond fish are definitely less likely to stick it to you. In my experience the bigger the water the stronger the fish.

That being said you got hosed! 10 to 12 pound fish are usually quite a thrill in any body of water. Sounds like a health issue to me, either because of oxygen, temperature or something else up with that pond or that specific fish. Even a 5 to 6lb carp fights at least on par with and probably a little bit better than an equivalent bass.
