

Subject: : Tips and Tricks

Topic: : Tight Sticking Erie Steelhead

Re: Tight Sticking Erie Steelhead

Author: : ryguyfi

Date: : 2011/9/15 15:55:35

URL:

3 seasons ago in Erie, I went from using indicators to not. I instantly had a higher hookup ratio. Those fish see a gauntlet of bobbers and indicators all day every day. It seemed like that, and me being a bit more active in my fishing, improved my catching. By all means, high stick with a tight line up in Erie.

Look for fish in the tail ends of a run too. Swing some nymphs and watch for their white mouth to open and close. Set the hook. I started doing this the last few years also and had some great luck. You miss a lot of hook ups striking when your flies and the fish are below you, but when they're active, the action is hot.