I've definatly got a foot to share, sending them home kits perhaps not so much.

The kits will be for use at the Jam only. The newbies will only be able to use them under the guidance of the tyer that provided them. Any kits that are unused will remain with the tyer that provided them.

If anyone wants to give materials away, that's up to them. I'm going to contact a few local fly shops to see if they'd be willing to donate materials, but I'm not counting on anything. We may get materials donated that don't apply to what we're tying, which is why I came up with the idea of the kits. This is still a work in progress as far as donations go, and probably will be up until 12/17. In all likelihood, most donated materials will wind up in the raffle. That's Sparky's job. Things like thread and hooks might get used, with the remnants going into the raffle. We'll just keep pulling tickets until everything's gone.

You insinuating I have a knack for getting things donated?

I will see what I can do.
