

---

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Good Small Stream Rod

Re: Good Small Stream Rod

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2011/10/25 16:52:26

URL:

Quote:

Why do people spool mono on fly reels in the great lakes?

Drift. Casting is typically very easy on the tribs, you could do just fine with any set up. So with casting out of the equation, getting a perfect drift, and having a lot of sensitivity is the next step of importance. Hence, mono.

Quote:

you should be able to bash em up pretty good without the need for overlining by 2 or 3

Oh, I agree you can catch them without severely overlining. But by the same token, I don't see any advantage to not doing it if the situation calls for it. It's not like I go in with a preference to stay light but will go heavy only if I "have" to. There is no initial preference either way, every day is a blank slate.

I have 2 reels which cover all of my collection of 5 wts. Each has 2 spools, for a total of 4 line combinations I can choose. 4 wt, 5 wt, 6 wt, and 7wt. Merely a question which reel/spool I put on which rod each and every outing.