That book got me reading Bryson's work. A walk in the wild was awesome, so was "In a Sunburned Country". If you read a "short history of nearly everything" then you will know something about just everything! He has written in all types of genre's, but my favorite are his hilarious adventure and travel stories. Thanks for the reminder, it is time for "A walk in the wild" to get a re-read, just as soon as I am done with "flyfishing through a mid life crisis" for the 3rd time.
