

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Tying the Blood dot.

Re: Tying the Blood dot.

Author: : Heritage-Angler

Date: : 2011/11/14 17:39:25

URL:

There was an online article on the Flyfisherman magazine website a while back on steelhead flies, and Ted Fauceglia tied his version of Jeff Blood's blood dot.

It was similar to zero's version, but only had one loop on either side. The key to the pattern was pushing the two loops together on the hook shank to "surround" the yolk post.

It's a great egg pattern - easy to tie in tiny sizes, and doesn't interfere with the hook gap.