Dear Chaz,

They most assuredly and indisputably are native to PA. Coyotes are native to North America, ergo they are native to Pennsylvania.

As feral canines, they don't recognize political boundaries, but that is hardly their fault. They move where food and habit is adequate for their survival, you know, like native species do. 😊

Maybe if man hadn't killed off the more appropriately "native" to you wolves, then non-natives like you and I wouldn't be having this discussion?
