I have never personally seen it. However, I've heard reliable reports of numbers of fish rising quite naturally to BWO's in the spring. Even saw a youtube style video once, but don't care to look for it.

Other than that, I'd think you'd be after aggression strikes. Which, with fresh run chromers, they can be pretty aggressive and it certainly wouldn't surprise me, though in those situations I'd think it'd be less effective than say, streamers. I have caught a few working streamers real fast, and they definitely chase or "wake" it and take quite a few.
