

Subject: : Fly Tying

Topic: : Spinner Wings

Re: Spinner Wings

Author: : JohnnyUtah

Date: : 2011/12/3 8:26:50

URL:

This is a true story. Im sure we all have had a compound rises. The trout just drifts along inspecting your fly. I had a nice brown do this to me on a bwo fall. I through 5 different spinners with no avail. I wondered.... I walked out below the trout and watched film for the spinners. When i saw the spinners, the wings where invisible. I took my snow shoe body bwo and snipped the wings off completely. So now it was more of floating nymph. I cast, i drift, he comes right up and takes. The moral of the story, most of the time spinner wings are invisible. A lot of rejections come from the wrong wing imprints on the water. A lot of the time no wings are better. imo. I have been doing this with picky trout ever since and it works.