TimB,

The fish was solidly hooked in the lower jaw, so he had no chance of escaping. It was actually a "through" hook, so perhaps he knew fighting was futile. In speaking with Sal, he mentioned that some fish were stocked in LR from a private pond and that this tiger was more than likely one of them. However, they were stocked in the Conservancy, so this guy made a pretty good migration south.

I was a member of TU at one point as well, but dropped my membership to reduce expenses. I attended a meeting or two and noticed what was mentioned by Tim Robsinson - this is a very aging organization (or at least local chapter). I was in my late 30's when I was a member and by far was one of the youngest ones there. The future doesn't bode well for any organization when its has an aging membership base with no 'replacement cycle'. Perhaps there are younger members on the rolls who just need some prompting to become active. I know that DTU has a several hundred members, so obviously those who were in attendance only represented a small fraction of the chapter.
