Walleye teeth are conical (much like you'd see in a large brown trout) and aren't typically known for cutting line. Fish like pike or bluefish, by contrast, have teeth that are edged like a two sided blade. Don't stick your fingers in a walleye's mouth....but I wouldn't worry about needing a bite tippet. I've never seen one bite thru line. Most hard core river walleye guys fish small jigs on very light line, typically about 6lb test.
