I was reading the last article in the new "Fly Fisherman." It was about a man, the author, finding a spot on a small public stream that no other people fish. It started off suspenseful, with the gentleman making his way through the brush and seen rises to grasshoppers. So he strung his rod and within a few casts started catching those fish, which turned out to be chubs. Apparently he new this all along and didn't tell anyone about his chub haven. Not only was he proud about the chubs he kept them and ate them --- yummy. 🤤
