

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : furlled leaders

Re: furlled leaders

Author: : Philly

Date: : 2007/1/10 11:43:09

URL:

I've been using them since I swapped tying materials for some with a guy on the old Virtual Fly Shop chat room. So I guess that makes it about 9 years. I still have one of the original ones though its length is much reduced. Fortunately, I know some folks who are willing to swap them for flies or materials and I managed to keep myself supplied. All the ones I have are made from tying thread, and I use them mainly for top water fishing though I have no problem drifting a nymph with one. I prefer thread ones over the ones made from mono or fluorocarbon. I may pick one up to try with my sinking lines. After I used my first one I never tied another leader. Right now I've got them to cover all my fishing from trout to saltwater.