

---

Subject: : Tips and Tricks

Topic: : Approaching A Spring Creek Volume 1: Picking your battles and controlling your wake

Re: Approaching A Spring Creek Volume 1: Picking your battles and controlling your wake

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2012/1/5 16:54:39

URL:

Great post Sal. Love your photo essays and it was very informative and fun to think about.

The following is TIC, because I just can't resist. How I would have approached the situation:

1. From the left side. Hope to catch all the little guys and put em behind me so as not to spook the big fish. After all, there's only 5 of them behind the big fish, how hard can this be?
2. Catch 2 of the little guys, then screw up and spook the rest, which in turn spooks the big fish.
3. Claim I don't care about size, I'm a numbers guy, and I caught 2 to your 1 in the pool. Claim superiority in fishing prowess.
4. Go fish somewhere else. After all, the only catchable fish in this stream are little. If I'm gonna catch little fish, I can catch a lot more somewhere else a lot easier.
5. Some future date, after a big rain and when conditions are high and muddy, return to this stream armed with big streamers. Catch big fish more easily. Claim I care about size rather than numbers. Again, claim superiority in fishing prowess, and spout something or other about knowing when to fish where is 99% of being a good fisherman.

:)