After discussing this with pcray, we're gonna try a different format. Those times I posted in post #1 - forget them.

We're gonna have stations setup for each topic. Depending on how many volunteer instructors we have, we may have up to all of the topics going on at the same time. This will eliminate time limits for the instructors, and allow the students to jump around to stations where they feel they need help. Each instructor will then have smaller "class" sizes, and will have the option to do more than one group presentation throughout the morning.

We're also taking suggestions for additional topics to be covered. I'll leave this open for two weeks from today, and then I have to send in the finalized itinerary to the Wildlands Conservancy.
