

Subject: : Hatch and Entomology Forum

Topic: : Hatch and Entomology Forum Q&A

Hatch and Entomology Forum Q&A

Author: : dkile

Date: : 2012/1/11 16:36:40

URL:

Hatch and Entomology Forum

PAFF is introducing a "Hatch and Entomology" Forum. This new forum has been created for all members to post insect photos and information, and to use as a reference for identifying and learning about insect hatches in Pennsylvania rivers and streams.

To use the forum, simply post your insect photo along with all relevant information, such as the stream location, date, common name and/or latin name of insect (if known) along with any further details such as time of day, water temperature and conditions, fish activity, etc.

When the identification of a particular insect is confirmed by PAFF moderators, the thread will be moved and locked into a category of insect. The categories are as follows: Mayflies, Caddisflies, Stoneflies, Midges, Craneflies, Terrestrials, and Others.

For reference, members will be able to search for any insect by selecting a category as listed above, and clicking on a particular insect species. To further enhance the forum, additional information such as links other sites or any other relevant information may be added to the locked thread by PAFF moderators.

It is our hope that the Hatch and Entomology forum will become a valuable database of information about PA insect hatches and add to your enjoyment of the site.

Ask questions from this sticky.