Have you heard anything about musky on the Yough? Its lower reaches(the river flows north, so closer to where it joins the Mon) are annually stocked with fingerlings and I think it has a pretty decent population. The Yough is smaller than the Allegheny and therefore not as intimidating to wade unfamiliar water in the winter. Plus, it would be a bit closer of a drive for me I think. I have read alot about the Allegheny too, so I know it would most likely be worth the drive.
