Recon is just another aspect of fishing I enjoy. I was already planning to float the majority of the yough with my brother this summer. Previous floats have produced decent smallies, so I am excited to explore more of the river.

Right now, I am thinking the Smithon area may be a decent place to try. Parks nearby provide the access and it is pretty undeveloped. The aerials dont show it, but that is some serious topographical change near 70 and where jacobs creek enters the yough. Why are the mouths of feeder streams such hot spots? I read the link you posted(scary awesome fish) and the guy kept mentioning the mouths. Is it just the break from the current, or do baitfish hang otu here?
