

Subject: : Stoneflies (Order: Plecoptera)

Topic: : Early Stone - Taeniopteryx Nivalis

Re: Early Stone

Author: : afishinado

Date: : 2012/1/14 7:25:19

URL:

Quote:

jayL wrote:

Perhaps it is a different bug, but I would expect to see berks county highlighted. Always good numbers of little early stones around some of those streams.

Jay,

Sandy's Stones are a little bigger and hatch a little later. My guess as to the one's you mentioned are Tiny Winter Blacks - Capniidae. They appear in the winter and crawl in the snow on the bank- just like the ones we saw last winter when we fished the Octoraro ("River of no Fish").

Here's a pic from Troutnut:

Attach file:

---

 Tiny Winter Black Stonefly - Capniidae.jpg (93.61 KB)

