I'll disagree with Jack's assesment on the eye insurance. Check your policy. Mine pretty much covers all of the expense. I have a very unusual perscription that is hard to get done correctly. I have been going to eyetique for several years now. <http://www.eyetique.com/products/contacts/?sbd=1&sfd=1>

This is a situation where you get what you pay for. I say spend as much as you can afford. I have had several pairs of sunglasses made here. Their customer services can not be beat. I broke a pair while drinking last year and they replaced no questions asked. My wife let the dog eat her last pair and they replaced the frames for a couple of bucks. They will also make any set of frames into sunglasses so you really have an unlimited choice on your frames.
