

Subject: : Tips and Tricks

Topic: : Trout in Lakes?

Re: Trout in Lakes?

Author: : dryflyguy

Date: : 2012/2/2 23:58:07

URL:

A few of my most productive honeyholes, are right where a good, aquatically rich stream flows into the back end of a lake.

The fishing is a little different in these spots however. The trout will often cruise around, taking flies off the top as they go.

So, you have to watch them for a little while and anticipate where they're headed. Then cast the fly out where - hopefully - it will be intercepted by the fish

Lots of fun. But can be kinda frustrating when the fish veers off in another direction from where your fly landed.