Thanks midnight. It was in Pittsburgh. Just a bit above lock and dam #2. Id like to try to figure out how to fish these this year. It seems to be specifically a night hatch. There were shucks drifting by for days. Ive read (troutnut possibly?) that they hatch so thick in Michigan that they show up on weather radar. If you hear some refer to a Michigan Caddis, its a misnomer and they are actually talking about Hex's.
