

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Salt Water Set Up

Re: Salt Water Set Up

Author: : scotto

Date: : 2007/1/12 10:35:10

URL:

Bruno,

check out feather-craft for sinking leader butt sections that are used with a floating line. They have them in different sink rates and for different line weights. While fishing stripers/blues last fall I was using primarily an intermediate line, but for getting patterns down further in the water column I used a floating line with different rate sinking butt sections depending on how deep I needed to be and it worked great. These sinking butts are used on floating lines as using them on smaller diameter intermediate lines makes casting a real chore. Ideally, I would buy a set of heads with running line from RIO or SA(which I may do), but they are expensive. This is a cost effective alternative. If you aren't sure what to get call Feather-Craft and ask for Ed. He has helped me with several similar situations and has always been right.