I would bet that lake Erie could hold a monster muskie. There is so much water to cover it would be possible for a true monster to be lurking around. I know that Shenango Lake in Sharon PA has some big muskies along with the Shenango River. Believe it or not there are some huge muskies in the Neshanock Creek. There are some deep holes in there where I have seen huge muskies crush trout after they are stocked. Plus the Neshanock Creek connects to the Shenango River. Also Moraine Lake in Butler has some big muskies. Another muskie lake is Pymatuning. There are some large fish in there.
