just curious...for those cutting the fly line after tying a nail knot, what do you apply to the fly line after you cut it so it doesnt get water logged and start to sink?

I've done the superglue thing before. Usually, I use a touch of head cement. Dab on the end of the fly line, and cover the knot to smooth it out some for going through the guides.

Whatever you use, it's gotta be viscous enough to set up around the knot, and not just run off before it dries.
