

Subject: : Tips and Tricks

Topic: : Indicator placement

Re: Indicator placement

Author: : FlySwatter

Date: : 2012/2/15 19:25:49

URL:

Assuming the indicator floats (not all do) you are effectively suspending your nymph at the desired depth. The target depth is usually a few inches or less from the bottom. Ideally, your nymph should be tapping the bottom as it drifts as drag-free as possible.

So, the indicator is usually best where csoult said: 1.5x - 2x the depth you are fishing. That's why floating indicators need to be moved constantly to adjust for changing depths.