

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : Winter salt

Re: Winter salt

Author: : Maurice

Date: : 2012/2/16 9:41:12

URL:

Salt has little detrimental effect on salmonoids. Because they are anadromous species (sea run) they have a tolerance for salt. In fact salt is the first choice to calm stressed fish in a hatchery environment. In sufficient doses it reduces the metabolism of stressed fish from reduced DO or temperature spikes.

I can say that when salt dosing is used that I have never seen minnow or bug life killed but the crayfish climb the walls to get out of it.