Started tying recently and was looking for something new to try last night when I stumbled upon the zebra midge. Looked really simple, yet deadly, so I tried a few. How appropriate to find this post here today. The ones I tied last night were size 14's (too big, I know...) but it was all I had laying around so I went with it more for the practice than anything else. Will hopefully be picking up some appropriately sized hooks tonight to make an arsenal for the box.
