

Subject: : Paflyfish General Forum

Topic: : Zebras

Re: Zebras

Author: : mushumatt

Date: : 2012/2/17 20:58:34

URL:

Well midges are present in all streams and most times are the majority of a trouts diet. You can fish them really anyway you feel the fish are feeding. But the late fall/winter time when the water is still cold midges are the majority of their diet. You will find some bwo on warmer days and small mayfly nymphs on rocks. But the majority of the feeding is done on midges. I like to fish it as my second fly only 6-10" from my dropper. But if its a colder day I will fish a tandem midge rig. I tend to start out with a zebra then move to different colors/ribbing/etc to target in on exactly what they are eating.