Make sure you can get the tippet through the eye, lol.

I recognize that midges are often 28-32's, but I fish 24's and do alright. I think the key you saw is that it needed to be in the film rather than floating for that particular day. I often tie my midges with a simple thread body and spinner wings, lightly dressed, and then let em waterlog!

It's still frustrating. The fish take em just fine, but they don't move to them. You gotta time the rises and essentially drift it in their mouths. I don't think you can escape that.
